

SPECIAL AWARDS

Constantia Rotary Good Fellowship Award: Nominated with motivation by peers. The learner that has been a friend to the entire group. The one who has been the shoulder to cry on, who listens and helps those who are struggling with something, the one who is brave enough to care and not be afraid to show it.

Kelly Jacobs

4I: The four I's are Intelligence, Involvement, Integrity and Industry. This award goes to the learner who has displayed all of the above character traits. The one who has a level of intelligence which has shown him/her capable of problem solving and carrying out tasks without much assistance. The learner is involved in activities outside the class, not only with extra-murals or sports but who supports school functions and events. The integrity (honesty) of the person is never in question. This learner also has proven him/herself committed to academics and who consistently in and out of the classroom.

Melissa Davids

Selfless Service Award: For the learner/s who are just that: selfless. Always willing to sacrifice time to help, assisting wherever they can, staying after school whenever needed, spending time here over weekends or during the holidays. No request seems too great.

Rae Classen

Service to the Community: For the learner who has placed others above him/herself. Someone who has dedicated time and energy to assist those who are less fortunate. A learner who has been of service to the community.

Simone Booyesen

Role Model: Reserved for one of the males. The learner who has set an example for his peers (from Grade 8 to Grade 12). Well mannered, polite, courteous, quietly gets on with doing what he believes is right. The epitome of a gentleman.

Brent Idas

Young Woman: Reserved (obviously) for one of the ladies. A young lady of strong character, determined to succeed, displays self-confidence. Others can learn from her tenacity.

Melissa Davids

Young Scientist of the Year: This award is for the learner who has an intuitive grasp of Science; one who is capable of lateral thinking and who able to use an analytical ability to solve problems. One who can apply scientific theory to real-life situations.

Brent Idas

Turn Around Award: A very special award for the bad apple that has made good. A learner who was naughty, cheeky, difficult (a real problem child) but has managed to make a complete u-turn and has become a totally different person. The one who has really turned around.

Siphelele Ncanywa

Patrick Northcott Award for Industry: An award which only a matriculant can receive. For the learner who has overcome tremendous academic odds, the one who works hard on a daily basis, staff have been able to see the commitment and dedication to work, the one who never gives up, even though they do not shine academically.

Jamey-Lee Inglis

Oral Communication Trophy: This trophy is awarded in recognition of the ability to communicate well in both official languages. Someone who is fully bilingual, well versed and articulate.

Rosalind Stegmann

Cultural: The cultural life of Henshilwood is as important to us as academics and sports. This award goes to the person who has made a significant contribution to the life of culture at our school. Someone who has made culture fun and interesting and put it in the spotlight.

Melissa Davids and Samantha Pinto

Sportsman of the Year:

André September

Stolle Award for Excellence in Leadership (MCL): This award is reserved for the matric learner who serves on the School Council. The recipient has been elected by his/her peers for excellence in leadership and dedication to the school, as well as for being the embodiment of the values instilled at NHHS.

Rae Classen

Henshilwood Award: This award is reserved for a learner who has served as a member of the MCL. One who has applied him/herself to studies, who has participated in extra-mural activities and served in a leadership capacity within those extra-murals at school and who has also displayed a sense of integrity and commitment.
